Chapter Three: Adjectives

One thing Poodle thought as he watched his friend What?
is that language can
name many things.

Can we tell them apart?
To Poodle, it's art.

There are all kinds of doors—
some big and some small,
some blue and some new,
and some to go through—

and too many floors—
some wood and some not,
and some that we bought
for the view.
