

The Story of Princess And

There was a bland princess named And who loved every word in the land.
If she had her way, she would spend every day
playing, with a word in each hand.
In the spring when the green grasses stand,
And went out to the sand.
She saw Green and Cloud and said, "Will you play with me loud?"
"Can't!" they panted, and ran.
Then And saw Slowly and Bugs
and asked, "Do you want to hold my hand?"
But Slowly and Bugs ran off with a moth,
in a hurry, you understand.
Then under a grand pine branch,
And saw You with Me.
"Where are your nouns?" asked And. "Want to play?"
Then, You took And's hand, and Me took And's hand, and away danced You And Me.
